

MR. S. H. HANCOX.

Mr. S. H. Hancox fulfils the task of shepherding Hobart's numerous varieties of trams into the proper courses, and affords citizens much good exercise in chasing the elusive cars. He served with distinction in France during the war, and has had a wide experience of the class of engineering with which he is now concerned. Whatever the comments of the citizens may be on the remarkable innovations which sometimes make their appearance on the lines, all must admit that the service is an excellent one, and to Mr. Hancox much of the credit for its efficient running is due.
